READING SEASON INSIDE!

Rangeley Public Library

MARCH 2018 NEWSLETTER

Dear Patron,

I love children's literature! Some of the best books around were written with children in mind, but they can be enjoyed by people of any age, even without a child to share them with (but if you can find a child to read with, that is twice the fun!)

This month's book order has some especially good-looking children's books. Little i by Michael Hall is a whimsical book about what happens when lower case i's dot falls off and rolls into the sea. The exciting adventures of the personified alphabet characters will keep kids enthralled, while the puns and other sly humor will entertain adult readers.

Motor Goose: Rhymes That Go! by Rebecca Colby is a great choice for young children who love vehicles. With the rollicking rhythm of the original Mother Goose, this collection is perfect for developing phonemic awareness, an important pre-reading skill, while also being just plain fun.

Check out the whole list of new books for March further down in this email. Also, check out the new book review section. I reviewed this month's book, but we would love to have reviews from our patrons. Maybe you have read a book recently that you think other Rangeley Library patrons would enjoy. It could be fiction or nonfiction, adult or juvenile, brand new or a classic.

Please feel free to send me an email or stop by in person if you have a book you would like to review.

BOOK REVIEW

This month's featured book is The End of Alzheimers: The First Program to Prevent and Reverse Cognitive Decline by Dale E. Bredesen. Alzheimers strikes fear into the heart of most people because of the lack of effective treatment options. Doctors have been trying for years to find a drug that will reverse the effects of cognitive decline with very little success. In this book, Bredesen says that Alzheimer's disease can actually be caused by three distinct conditions with thirty-six metabolic factors which need to be treated separately. He claims to have helped more than 200 Alzheimer's patients to reverse the effects of cognitive decline and go on to live healthy, normal lives by making some changes in their lifestyles and eating habits. While Bredesen does not claim to have all of the answers to Alzheimers, he shares some thought-provoking ideas based on years of research. Some of the chapters, particularly those in the middle of the book, are technical and probably more suited to doctors. However, parts are quite accessible to the average reader, and may offer some helpful information for those struggling with cognitive decline. Stop by the library to borrow a copy of this book today!

Attention Cloud Library Users

We have been purging inactive Rangeley Public Library accounts. If an account shows no activity for several years, it is closed out. However, we have no way of knowing if an account is used for online books. Therefore, if you use your account strictly for reading ebooks through the Cloud Library, it will appear as inactive in our system and be removed. If this happens to you, simply come to the library and sign up for a new account. To prevent this from happening to you in the future, occasionally coming to the library to check out a physical book will show the system that your account is still an active account and you will not have the hassle of having to create a new account. We are sorry if this causes anyone any inconvenience.

LIBRARY FUNDRAISING

Spaghetti Dinner: a Mouth-Watering Success!

The Cerminara family, with two adorable new members, once again served up a scrumptious Italian feast for the many friends of the Rangeley Public Library who turned out for this annual fund raising event. Thank you to all who participated!

Everyone Helps!

Three generations of the Cerminara family were in the kitchen to serve delicious Italian cuisine.

Here, some of the grandchildren help prepare leftover jars of sauce to sell.
